Please see the Supplemental Information and Rights for European Residents section for more information.

How We Protect Your Information

We have implemented appropriate technical and organizational data security measures designed to protect the security of any personal information we process from unauthorized access, loss, or misuse. To the extent appropriate or required by applicable law, these security measures include the following:

- Access to personal information is limited to authorized employees and service providers who need access to perform the activities described in this Privacy Policy on our behalf.

- Personnel engaged in the processing of personal information are informed of the confidential nature of personal information, receive appropriate training on their responsibilities, and are obligated pursuant to our policies to maintain the confidentiality of personal information.
- The effectiveness of our security measures are regularly tested, assessed, and evaluated to ensure the ongoing security of processing systems.
- Internet-connected databases containing personal information are monitored for unauthorized intrusions using network-based and/or host-based intrusion detection mechanisms.
- Service providers and other third parties engaged by us to process personal information on our behalf are contractually obligated to process personal information only on our documented instructions and must provide similar security measures as those used by us or as required under applicable law.
- All supplied sensitive/credit information is transmitted via Secure Socket Layer (SSL) technology and then encrypted into our payment gateway provider's database only to be accessible by those authorized with special access rights to such systems and are required to keep the information confidential. After a transaction, your private information (credit cards, social security numbers, financials, etc.) will not be stored on our servers.

Although we strive to provide reasonable and appropriate security for the personal information we process, no security system can prevent all potential security breaches. If we do so in the future, we will modify this Privacy Policy accordingly. More information about “do not track” is contained in our Cookie Notice and Controls below.

Important Information Regarding Minors

Our connected services are intended for general audiences. Cookie Notice and Controls

Our connected services use cookies and similar technologies to help us understand how you interact with our products and connected services, to improve your experience, and to allow you to use certain features made available through our connected services (such as sharing content via social networks or other communications channels).

This Cookie Notice describes how cookies and similar technologies are used with our connected services, as well as your choices regarding the use of cookies on our services and the tools available to you to exercise your preferences. For more information regarding the collection and use of information via our connected services, please read our Privacy Policy.

Overview of Cookies and Similar Technologies

A cookie is a small text file that a website saves on your computer or mobile device when you visit the site, either for the duration of your visit (a session cookie) or for repeat visits (a persistent cookie). Session cookies are deleted from your computer or device once you leave the connected service. Persistent cookies remain on your device and are sent back to the originating website on subsequent visits (or to another website that recognizes the cookie) to notify the website of your previous online activity. Cookies on this connected service may be delivered by Luxe Getaway (a first-party cookie) or a third-party (a third-party cookie) and may also be set in association with emails you receive from us. Cookies help us enhance your experience when using our connected services. They also help us understand how people use our connected services (such as which pages or features are most popular) so that we can better serve our users and members.

In addition to cookies, we may also use other similar technologies with our connected services, such as pixel tags (also known as clear GIFs, web beacons, pixels, or web bugs), local storage, statistical identifiers, and software development kits. Pixel tags are small blocks of code installed on a website that allow a third-party to deliver its third-party cookies when a visitor goes to the website and are generally used by third parties to monitor and track user activity on a website. Local storage (such as HTML 5) allows a website to store and retrieve data on an individual's device with no expiration date. Statistical identifiers refer to identifiers created using certain device and server data. Collectively, this information makes a user's browser or device sufficiently distinct for a website to reasonably determine that it is encountering the same browser or device over time and used for the same purposes as cookies. Software development kits (also called SDKs) function like third-party cookies and pixel tags but operate in the mobile app environment where cookies and pixel tags do not function as effectively. Instead of using cookies and pixels tags, an app developer can install pieces of code provided by third parties (such as analytics providers) in its mobile app in order for the third parties to monitor and analyze the use and performance of the mobile app.

These technologies enable us and our partners to recognize when someone has visited our connected services or opened an email, allowing us to do things such as monitor the traffic patterns of users from one page within our Website to another, understand whether a visitor has come to our Website from an online advertisement displayed on a third-party site or in an email, and measure and improve the performance of our connected services. In many instances, these technologies are reliant on cookies to function properly, and so disabling or declining cookies will also disable their functioning.

Cookies Used with Our Online Services

Like most websites, we use certain cookies and similar technologies with our connected services that allow us to collect various information that does not (on its own) identify any particular individual. This helps us identify visitors who return to our connected services, informs us of things such as how many users visited our connected services, the services, web pages and features accessed, and whether there were any technical problems in loading pages or navigating through our connected services. By collecting this information, we learn what parts of our connected services are the most interesting or valuable to our users and members and can monitor overall interest in our products and services. It also lets us spot technical problems with our connected services so we can address them right away and helps us upgrade our services and improve our offerings for our users and members.

The types of information typically collected through cookies and similar technologies include IP address (which is used to infer approximate location); Internet service provider; browser type and settings; device information (for example, type of device, operating system, device manufacturer); referring/exiting URL; request/response date and time; clickstream data; device ID or advertising ID; and your name, email address and password if you are logging into your account. We may use Google Analytics cookies to collect information about how visitors use our connected services. These cookies collect information in the aggregate to give us insight into how our connected services are being used. We anonymize IP addresses in Google Analytics, and the anonymized data is transmitted to and stored by Google on servers in the United States. Google may also transfer this information to third parties where required to do so by law, or where such third parties process the information on Google's behalf. Google will not associate your IP address with any other data held by Google. The following table has more information about these cookies.

For an overview of these Google Analytics cookies, please visit: <https://support.google.com/analytics/answer/6004245>.

You may install a Google Analytics Opt-out Browser Add-on by going here: <https://tools.google.com/dlpage/gaoptout>.

Geolocation Information

Depending on the connected services and your computer or device permissions, we may collect information about your device's approximate (for example, country or zip code) or precise location.
